NEW YORK

té casan

How do you catch a lady's eye in SoHo? Open the largest shoe store in Manhattan (382 W. Broadway). With top-shelf talent from such fashion houses as Vivienne Westwood and Alexander McQueen and great price points, "window shopping" loses all meaning. Such is the essence of té casan, which is Gaelic for "a woman's path." Believe us, it's a path worth traveling.

LAS VEGAS

Christian Lacroix

Paris' favorite couture confectioner, Christian Lacroix, is turning heads stateside with the debut of his first U.S. store at the Forum Shops at Caesars Palace (3500 S. Las Vegas Blvd.). Melding crimson flecked minimalism with luxurious floridity, Lacroix teamed with the Kreo Gallery to create a bold space that echoes his label's dramatic style. A Murano glass and Swarovski crystal totem commands the entrance while a futuristic red couch snakes in and out of baroque consoles and off-balance vitrines. These are must-see clothes in a must-see environment in a city befitting their grandeur. —AT

SEATTLE

LIMN

Cabins on roofs, paintings transformed into rugs, and furniture resembling a praying mantis. This is commonplace for Dan Friedlander's San Francisco-based store LIMN, the West Coast's biggest champion of contemporary design, furniture, and accessories. Now celebrating its 25th anniversary, LIMN opens a 9,000-square-foot Seattle location this winter (629 Western Ave.). Not to miss: the revolutionary credenzas by Italian design company Ceccotti (above). —AT
